Dear Vince,

Thanks for being such a good sport about my using your picture for the ban comic sans campaign. I'm sending you some stickers and a print of some artwork that was inspired by the best sticker (not mine). Also, I'm making posters now. I'll send you one if you'd like.

Best Always,

We Have Liftoff!!!

Bill Gates and Jay Leno enjoy one of many light moments during the launch presentation.

Windows 95 Launched!

Campus Gala Marks Major Milestone in PC Computing

Microsoft affirmed its status as an American icon yesterday.

In a widely publicized celebration at the Redmond campus, the company formally launched Windows 95, marking the culmination of an unprecedented development effort, and kicking off a high-profile advertising campaign that built on excitement about the new product that reached virtually every corner of the globe.

Nearly 2,500 media and industry heavyweights filled the campus, where a carnival-style showcase of Windows 95-based technology was on display, along with games, performers, food booths, and a giant ferris wheel. Airplanes and helicopters hovered overhead throughout the day.

The mid-day presentation that kicked off the event featured a relaxed Bill Gates trading jibes with wisecracking Jay Leno, whose one-liners about his sparse knowledge of PCs allowed Gates to show off the new operating system's ease of use and power. Gates and Brad Silverberg, senior VP of the Personal Systems Division, also detailed the product's widespread industry support.

The presentation concluded with a spectacular finale in which Gates introduced the entire Windows 95 development team. As the back wall of the main tent pulled away, the team came into view, cheering wildly, on bleachers outside the tent. The crowd erupted.

Self-Contained Power Grid, Underground Phone Lines in High-Tech Tent City

When winds kicked up and rain poured down, many employees last week looked with equal measures of fascination and trepidation toward the corporate campus sports fields where, with remarkable speed, a high-tech tent city was under construction to house the Windows 95 launch event.

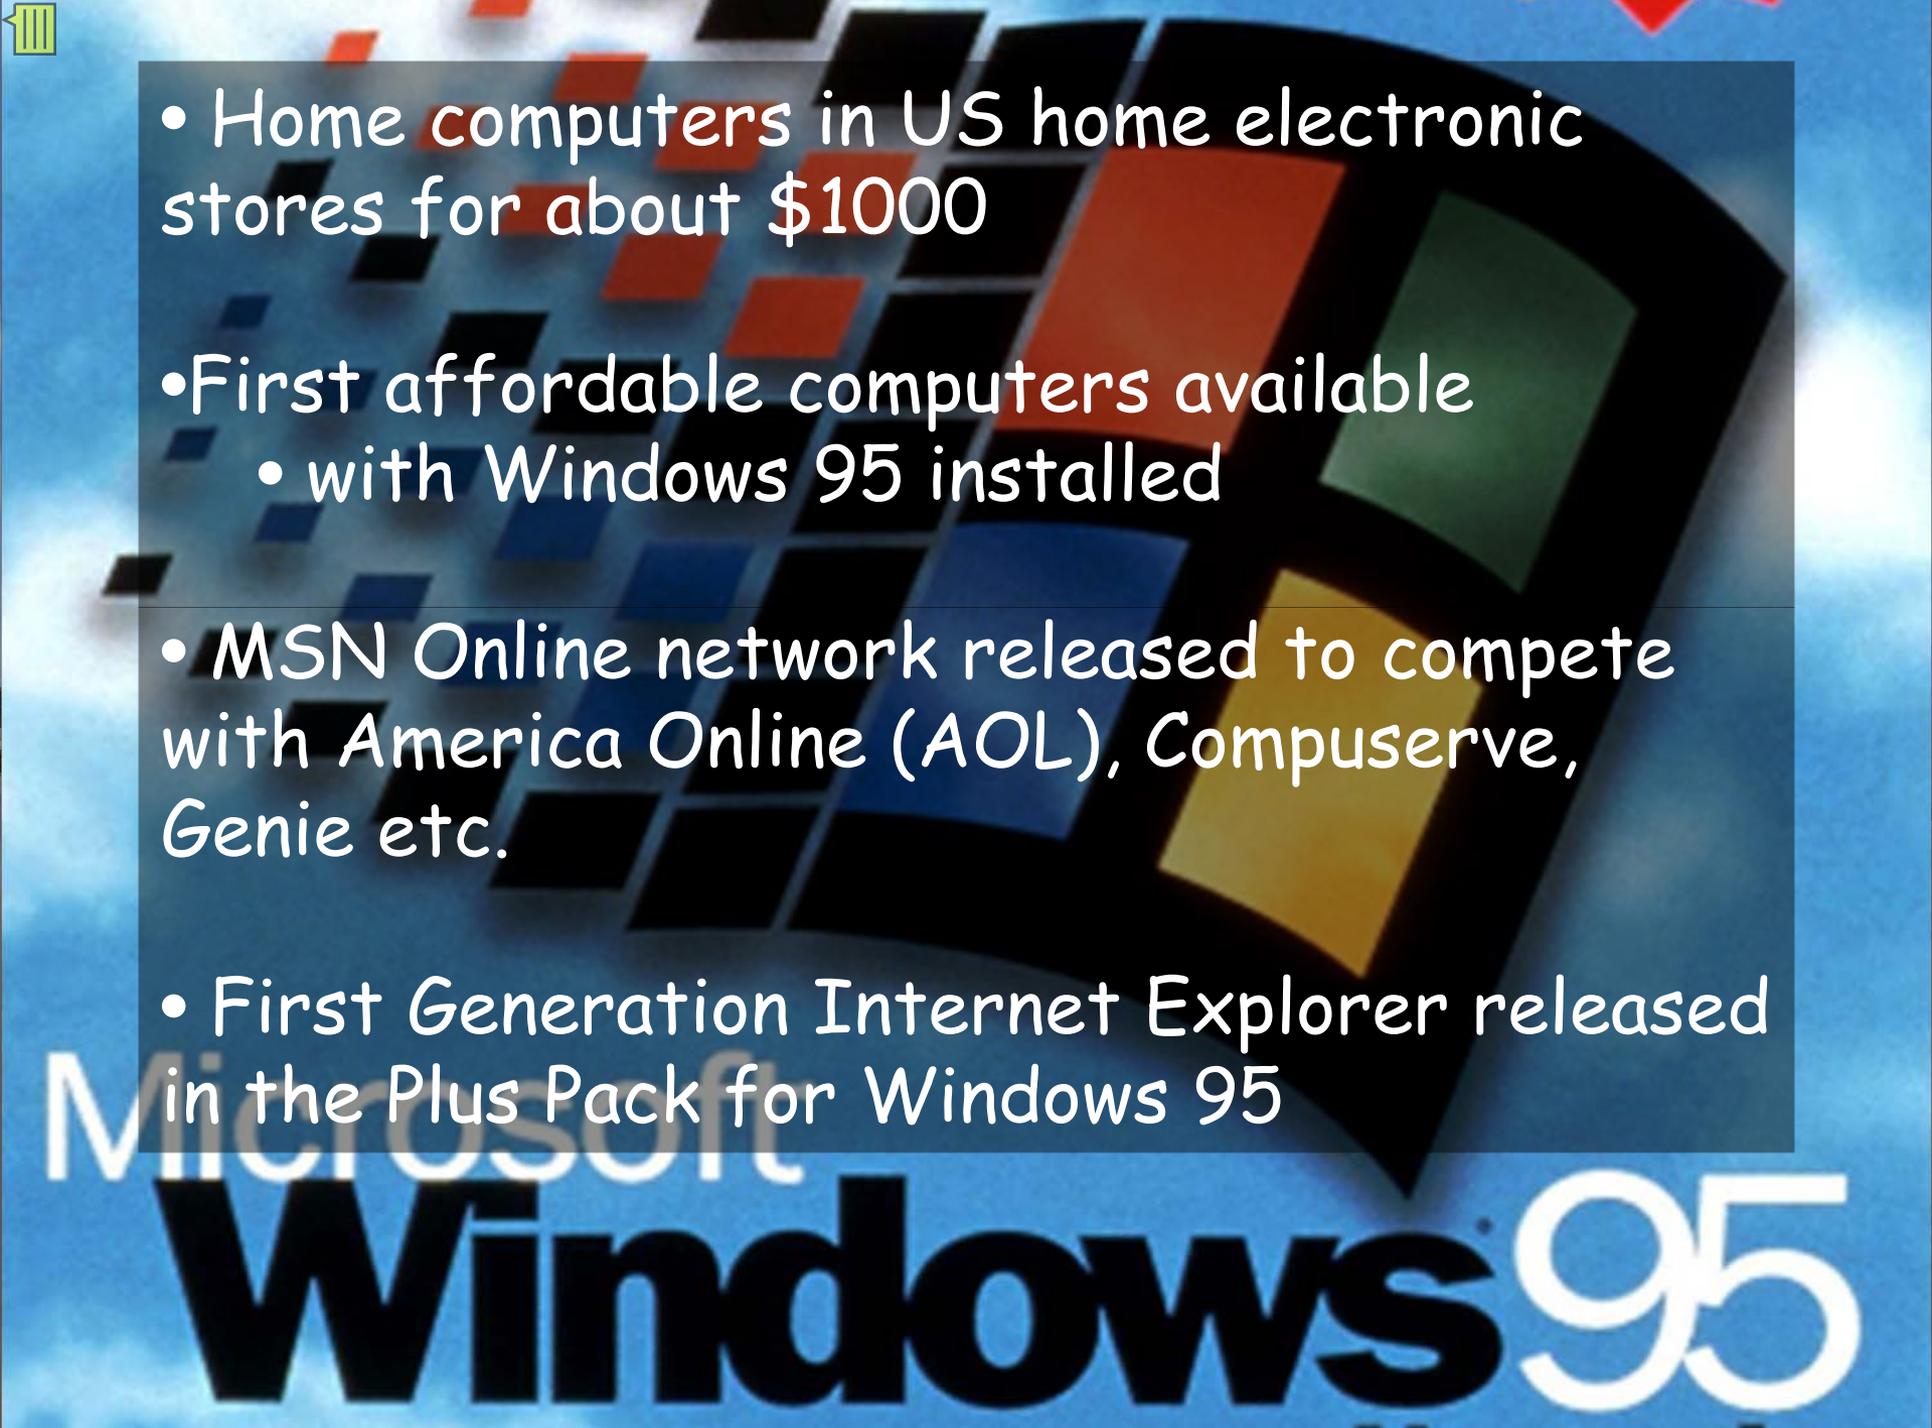

Autumn, it appeared, had decided to make an early showing. As crews pitched tents and ran lines

The image shows a Windows Explorer window titled 'Fonts' with the address bar set to 'Fonts'. The window contains a list of font files, each with a small icon and a name followed by its format in parentheses. The fonts are arranged in a grid-like view. The list includes various serif, sans-serif, and script fonts, as well as some specialized fonts like 'Modern (All res)' and 'Script (All res)'. The window's title bar shows standard Windows window controls (minimize, maximize, close) and the Norton AntiVirus icon in the bottom right corner.
